Smith Explains Position.

In explaining the disagreement between the House and Senate conferees Mr. Smith said, in part:

"The Senate agrees with the House that the trackage down New Jersey avenue is preferable to that down North Capitol street, and also that the crosstown service is better legislation than that contained in the Senate bill.

"The Senate insists upon their proposition for tracks in front of the Union Station, which, to make it clear to every Is member of the House, are just double the number of those on Pennsylvania avenue. They insist also on either side of the Speaker of the House, or suppose our own Plaza that there should be the same numsylvania avenue and also down Delaware
